

policing

Poland: Policing Women, Policing Minorities

Agnieszka Kościńska

[1]

Publisher: Social Research: An International Quarterly [2]

Year of publication: 2024

Book/ journal title: "Social Research: An International Quarterly" vol. 91 no. 4

We recommend the latest issue of "Social Research: An International Quarterly", including an article by Prof. A. Kościńska

The departure point for this essay is the massive 2020 pro-choice protests following a ruling by Poland's Constitutional Tribunal that restricted access to abortion. The essay analyzes police violence during these demonstrations, which was mostly directed at young, urban, middle-class women, and draws attention to changing Polish attitudes toward the police and their brutality vis-à-vis notions of class, gender, race, and ethnicity. In the preceding 30 years, there had been many cases of police brutality in Poland, mostly targeting minorities, migrants, and working-class men, but these had been ignored by the Polish public. Only after police violence was directed toward young, urban, middle-class women did the Polish public finally start to take notice.

The article is part of the monographic issue of Social Research: An International Quarterly, an organ of The New School for Social Research (publisher Johns Hopkins University Press), entitled Policing, more: <https://www.socres.org/post/914-winter-2024-policing> [3]

Access to the article from computers at the University of Warsaw or through the University Library:
<https://muse.jhu.edu/issue/54137> [4]

Source URL: <https://www.etnologia.uw.edu.pl/en/publications/policing>

Links

[1] <https://www.etnologia.uw.edu.pl/en/publications/policing>

[2] <https://www.socres.org/>

[3] <https://www.socres.org/post/914-winter-2024-policing>

[4] <https://muse.jhu.edu/issue/54137>