Globalisation processes have made mobility a founding stone for many markets. One of those markets are the courier services, which have gained importance with the boom in e-commerce. In the article I present an analysis of materials gathered during my 2020–2022 research on the foodways of Warsaw parcel couriers from the perspective of anthropology of food, mobility and work. I include the context of this peculiar labour market, factors influencing individual eating behaviours, as well as an overview of different eating strategies.
