This summer school is to bring together students in social sciences and humanities from Europe, the Caucasus, and Central Asia to discuss the long-term and hidden social, cultural, historical, and political consequences affecting societies situated between empires.

We will explore the subjectivity of individuals and communities inhabiting these in-between spaces or imperial peripheries from diachronic and synchronic perspectives, while also examining their agency both within and against imperial structures.

- How have they used the available cultural repertoire?
- How have they shaped their sense of identity and understanding of the world around them?
- In what ways have they taken advantage of the opportunities that come with being part of an empire?

We will also discuss the impact of major political transformations of the 20th century on local communities and individuals, as well as analyse the effects of Russia's ongoing war against Ukraine on communities bordering the Russian Federation.

JOIN US TO

- analyse regional and global interactions from global, glocal and local perspectives
- understand discourses of historical appropriation and reinterpretation in public spaces
- examine models and concrete forms of self-conception and self-imagination
- decolonize knowledge on historical, social, political and cultural processes taking place in between the empires.

KEYNOTE SPEAKERS

Timur Dadabaev, University of Tsukuba

Iwona Kaliszewska [2], University of Warsaw

Ivan Peshkov, Adam Mickiewicz University

Andrii Portnov, European University Viadrina

Tomasz Zarycki, University of Warsaw

Invited experts will present keynote lectures in their respective fields on Eastern Europe, the Caucasus, Central Asia, and their historical and anthropological connections to the wider world, including the rival imperial powers to Russia.

A two-day field trip to Podlasie and Kurpie, located in the northeastern part of Poland, will serve as a practical "laboratory" for discussing the core themes of the summer school.

Discussion panels with students' presentation based on their research will be discussed by an expert who will provide feedback and moderate an extended Q&A session.

Prior to the summer school, students will be assigned compulsory readings in English.
